Unique online memorial to fallen WWI soldiers

Kentico Software helps to preserve history for variety of countries including Australia

Sydney, 15th July 2015 – A non-profit organization called The World Remembers (www.theworldremembers.org) has embarked on a mission to create an online memorial to 9 million Australian, Canadian, and European soldiers who lost their lives in World War I. This unique online database helps families determine if they have family members among the fallen soldiers. The software being used to run this ambitious project is provided by Kentico Software, a European company with a significant and growing presence here in Australia.

The World Remembers database and website, created by a Canadian non-profit organization, was officially launched last November. The database will ultimately contain the names of more than 300,000 soldiers from Australia, Canada, India, The United Kingdom, Belgium, The Czech Republic, Germany, Turkey, and France who fell during WWI. The project is being completed in phases: names from 1914 are online now; names from 1915 will be completed before the end of this year; and over the next three years, the organization will focus on entering the names of fallen veterans from 1916-1918.

"We really appreciate the interest that Kentico has taken in the project. Both The World Remembers and Kentico have an international outlook. Needless to say, the Kentico tool for managing content on The World Remembers site is magnificent. We look forward to a great relationship with them throughout the WWI Centenary years," states Robert Thomson, producer for The World Remembers.

"This is a meaningful endeavor, to preserve this information for future generations," adds Petr Palas, founder and CEO of Kentico Software. "We are delighted that we could support such a worthy cause and help to preserve the memory of Czech and other soldiers who fought and died in the war."
