Kentico Developer Road Show Coming to a City Near You

Kicking off in Toronto and Boston, show promotes best practices and collaboration among Kentico users; more dates to be added soon

Bedford, New Hampshire, USA, June 10, 2015 – Kentico Software, the Web Content and Customer Experience Management provider, today announced the Kentico Developer Road Show, a series of events created to provide Kentico's user communities a forum through which to learn about Kentico's latest product features, share best practices, and collaborate with other users. There is no cost associated with attending these events.

When registering for a Roadshow event, users are given the opportunity to vote on the topics they would most like to discuss. Such topics may include:

- Kentico & Azure
- E-commerce Customization
- Performance / Scalability
- Web Farms / Development Scenarios
- Kentico 9 Roadmap

The first two scheduled roadshow dates are as follows:

- Toronto: June 16, 2015

"We created the Kentico Developer Roadshow to give developers within the Kentico community a chance to meet with Kentico subject matter experts and fellow users in a casual environment and without having to travel very far," said Kentico Technical Evangelist Bryan Soltis. "We will be announcing additional dates and cities, focusing first on North America and then expanding to other geographies. We're very excited to be able to meet with users more frequently, and the response so far from our community has been overwhelmingly positive."
