Media Contact:

Chris Blake
MSR Communications
Phone: +1-415-989-9000
E-mail: chris@msrcommunications.com

Long-Time Kentico MVP Bryan Soltis Joins Company as New Technical Evangelist

Nashua, New Hampshire, February 11, 2015 – Kentico Software, the Web Content and Customer Experience Management provider, today announced that Bryan Soltis is joining the company as Technical Evangelist.

Bryan Soltis last served as Director of Technology & Research for Bit-Wizards, a Kentico Gold Partner, where he pioneered the web and app developer's Kentico development. As a Microsoft Azure VTSP, Bryan has architected several solutions utilizing cloud technologies and platforms for global applications. Bryan was honored as Employee of the Year in 2009 and 2010, and a Superior Performer in 2008, 2011, 2012, and 2013. A Kentico MVP since 2010, Bryan's direct involvement with the Kentico community and close work with the Kentico development team has garnered this accolade year after year.

"I've gotten to know Bryan as a passionate member of the Kentico development community for the past six years," said Kentico CEO and Founder Petr Palas. "It's not every day that you get to hire someone who already has earned the respect of everyone within your organization. Bryan is a tremendous asset; the energy and technical expertise he brings to Kentico, as well as to our partners and customers, will be invaluable as we continue to build on our momentum in the marketplace."

As Technical Evangelist, Bryan will be responsible for supporting the Kentico community and providing guidance and assistance to partners and vendors in their development. Through the publication of articles, webinars, and presentations, Bryan will educate the community on development best practices, increase developer adoption, inspire new development, and promote Kentico to technical and non-technical audiences.

"I'm extremely excited to be joining the same talented team of dedicated digital marketing professionals that I've worked very closely with and have grown to admire over the years," said Bryan Soltis, newly-named Technical Evangelist at Kentico. "I can't wait to start working as an official part of the organization to help Kentico clients, partners and the development community use Kentico to take their projects to new heights."

Bryan brings more than 15 years of experience designing and implementing solutions using Microsoft technologies, having also worked as a Senior Technical Test Developer at online testing provider QWIZ, and Project Leader at MeasureUp, where he developed and maintained applications for such Fortune 500 companies as Microsoft, HP, and Cisco. Bryan attended school at Kennesaw State University where he studied computer science. He holds certifications as a Microsoft Certified Professional Developer in .NET 4.0, 3.5, and 2.0 and is also a Kentico Certified Developer, Certified Trainer, and US Kentico MVP.

About Kentico
Kentico brings smart integrated digital marketing to businesses of all sizes with a comprehensive suite of solutions. With Kentico's Web Content Management, Online Marketing, E-commerce, Online Communities, and Intranet & Collaboration solutions, clients can deliver superior cross-channel customer experiences across all devices. Based on the Microsoft .NET platform, Kentico comes with 450 web parts and fully documented API and is available on-premise or in the cloud. Flexible, robust and scalable, Kentico delivers right-first-time technology, out-of-the-box speed, and affordable sophistication to help customers meet their goals faster and more profitably.

About Kentico Software
Founded in 2004, Kentico is headquartered in the Czech Republic with offices in the US, UK, and Australia. A Microsoft Gold Certified Partner with 1,100 digital agency partners, Kentico powers more than 18,000 websites in 90 countries. Customers include Bacardi; Great British Chefs; Gibson; Mazda; Microsoft; Mighty River Power; Run and Become; Sony; Vodafone.

All product and company names herein may be trademarks of their respective owners.